義大利聲樂室內樂：協奏曲風牧歌

Italian Vocal Chamber Music: The Concertato Madrigal

1. Concertato medium 協奏媒介 : solo voices + basso continuo
1. + optional instruments — texture contrast is key

2. Monteverdi's Books 5–8 (1605–1638) trace the evolution:
2. from polyphonic madrigal → concerted madrigal with continuo

3. Book 7 Concerto (1619): strophic variations, canzonettas
3. Book 8 Madrigali guerrieri et amorosi (1638): stile concitato

4. Forms include madrigals, canzonettas, arias, recitatives,
4. dialogues — all with ritornellos & basso continuo

NAWM 82: Monteverdi — Ohimè dov'è il mio ben

蒙特威爾第《噢，我的愛人在何方》

- Romanesca bass pattern: repeating harmonic progression
- over which two soprano voices weave expressive duet

- From Book 7 Concerto (1619): strophic variations on a
- ground bass — each stanza varies melody over same bass

- Two sopranos + basso continuo: intimate chamber texture;
- ritornello frames each section (instrumental interlude)

- Demonstrates shift from polyphonic madrigal → concertato
- chamber song with basso continuo as structural foundation

固定低音 Basso Ostinato / Ground Bass

Repeating Bass Patterns as Structural Foundation

- Basso ostinato 固定低音 : a bass pattern that repeats while
- melody changes above — usually 2, 4, or 8 bars in triple meter

- Romanesca, Ruggiero: well-known bass patterns from
- Spain/Italy used for songs & instrumental variations

- Descending tetrachord 下行四度 : stepwise descent spanning
- a 4th — associated with lament; Monteverdi's Lamento della ninfa

- Chacona / Ciaccona 夏乾舞曲 : from the Americas via Spain;
- I–V–vi–V bass progression; Monteverdi's Zefiro torna (1632)

清唱套曲的發展 The Cantata

From Strophic Song to Multi-Section Drama

- Cantata = "a piece to be sung" (It. cantare);
- before 1620 meant a published collection of strophic arias

- By mid-century: secular composition for solo voice + continuo,
- multiple sections of recitative + aria on a dramatic text

- Composed for private aristocratic performances;
- preserved mostly in manuscripts, not printed

- Leading cantata composers: Luigi Rossi, Antonio Cesti,
- Giacomo Carissimi, and Barbara Strozzi

芭芭拉・史特羅乞 Barbara Strozzi (1619–1677)

The Most Prolific Composer of Secular Vocal Music of Her Century

- Born in Venice; adopted (perhaps biological) daughter of
- poet Giulio Strozzi; studied with Cavalli (Monteverdi's student)

- Published 8 collections (1644–1664): over 100 madrigals,
- arias, cantatas, motets — more cantatas than any peer

- Lagrime mie (NAWM 77): solo cantata alternating recitative,
- arioso, & aria; focus on unrequited love; dissonant expression

- Did not perform publicly due to social class;
- published as a way to be "heard" beyond private gatherings

天主教聖樂：宗教協奏曲

Catholic Sacred Music: The Sacred Concerto

- Stile antico 古風 vs. stile moderno 現代風 coexist;
- Palestrina's style preserved alongside basso continuo textures

- Large sacred concerto 大型宗教協奏曲 : cori spezzati,
- multiple choirs + soloists + instruments (G. Gabrieli tradition)

- Small sacred concerto 小型宗教協奏曲 : 1–4 solo voices +
- continuo (± 1–2 violins); practical for smaller churches

- Viadana's Cento concerti ecclesiastici (1602):
- first printed sacred vocal music with basso continuo

NAWM 83: Grandi — O quam tu pulchra es

格蘭第《妳多麼美麗》(1625)

- Alessandro Grandi (1586–1630): Monteverdi's deputy at
- St. Mark's, Venice; pioneered the solo motet with continuo

- Text from Song of Songs 雅歌 : dialogue of lovers read as
- metaphor for God's love for the Church

- Blends recitative style ("O quam tu pulchra es") with
- lyric aria in triple meter ("Surge, propera, sponsa mea")

- Contrasting styles within a single piece mirror the new
- operatic vocabulary applied to sacred expression

修道院中的音樂 Music in Convents

Hidden Musical Cultures Behind Convent Walls

- Church officials restricted music in convents, barring
- male teachers; yet nuns developed thriving musical cultures

- Lucrezia Vizzana (1590–1662): entered Santa Cristina in
- Bologna as a child; Componimenti musicali (1623) — motets

- Chiara Margarita Cozzolani (1602–ca. 1677): four collections
- of sacred concertos; polychoral Vespers with modern arias

- These women published despite restrictions, showing
- convent music rivalled standards outside convent walls

神劇 Oratorio

Sacred Drama Without Staging

- Oratorio = sacred dramatic work combining narrative,
- dialogue, & commentary; NOT staged, with a narrator (testo)

- Italian oratorio 義大利語神劇 : vernacular, shorter,
- for spreading faith to commoners; performed during Lent

- Latin oratorio 拉丁語神劇 : for aristocratic courts;
- longer, more elaborate — like opera without costumes

- Named after the oratory (prayer hall) where devotional
- meetings with music were held in 17th-century Rome

NAWM 84: Carissimi — Historia di Jephte

卡里西米《耶弗他》(ca. 1648)

- Giacomo Carissimi (1605–1674): leading Latin oratorio
- composer; based on Judges 11:29–40 (Jephtha's vow)

- Narrator in recitative; Jephtha's victory recounted by
- 6-voice ensemble with stile concitato battle effects

- Final scene: daughter laments with descending tetrachord
- bass; two sopranos echo her cadential flourishes

- Six-voice chorus responds with polychoral & madrigalistic
- effects — blending operatic drama with sacred purpose

路德宗教會音樂

Lutheran Church Music: Italian Influence in Germany

- German composers absorbed Italian monodic & concertato
- techniques while maintaining polyphonic chorale traditions

- Sacred concerto in Germany: Hassler, Praetorius adopted
- the large-scale Venetian model; small concerto even more common

- J. H. Schein: Opella nova (1618, 1626) — German sacred
- concertos blending Lutheran chorale with Italian concertato

- Thirty Years' War (1618–48): devastated resources;
- forced smaller-scale works suited to reduced church forces

海因里希・許茨 Heinrich Schütz (1585–1672)

Master of Conveying the Meaning of Words Through Music

- Innkeeper's son; singing talent noticed by Landgrave of
- Hesse at age 12; sent to study law, then music in Venice

- Studied with Giovanni Gabrieli in Venice (1609–1612);
- visited again during Monteverdi's era — absorbed both styles

- Chapelmaster at the Saxon court in Dresden (1615–1672);
- first German opera (Dafne, 1627, music lost)

- Thirty Years' War forced him to publish Kleine geistliche
- Konzerte (1636, 1639) for reduced forces — widely popular

乖茨的主要作品 Schütz: Major Works

Sacred Collections Spanning Five Decades

- Psalmen Davids (1619): German polychoral psalms —
- Venetian grandeur with sensitive German text treatment

- Cantiones sacrae (1625): Latin motets with harmonic
- novelties; Symphoniae sacrae I (1629): Italian concertato style

- Kleine geistliche Konzerte (1636, 1639): 1–5 voices +
- continuo only — composed for war-depleted church resources

- Symphoniae sacrae III (1650): large-scale concertos;
- Historia (Seven Last Words), Christmas History, 3 Passions

NAWM 85: Schütz — Saul, Saul, was verfolgst du mich

乖茨《掃羅，掃羅，你為何迫害我？》(1650)

- From Symphoniae sacrae III (1650): large sacred concerto
- for 2 choirs + 6 soloists + 2 violins + continuo

- Based on Acts 9 & 26: Christ's blinding voice to Saul
- on the road to Damascus — a dramatic conversion scene

- Musical figures: cadentiae duriusculae (harsh dissonances)
- at "Saul"; saltus duriusculus (harsh leap) in solo section

- Combines Gabrieli's polychoral grandeur with Monteverdi's
- dissonant rhetoric — Italian form with German sacred purpose

NAWM 86: Schütz — O lieber Herre Gott

乖茨《親愛的主，上帝》— Kleine geistliche Konzerte

- From Kleine geistliche Konzerte (1636): small sacred
- concerto for solo voice + basso continuo only

- Wartime austerity: no instruments beyond continuo;
- yet Schütz achieves profound expression with minimal forces

- Musical figures capture every nuance of the German text;
- word-painting conveys meaning through melody & harmony

- Popular throughout Germany — suitable for small churches
- with limited resources during the Thirty Years' War

乖茨的遺產 Schütz's Legacy

Bridging Italian Innovation and German Sacred Tradition

- Historia tradition: The Seven Last Words of Christ (1650s?)
- and Christmas History (1664) — narrative + concertato scenes

- Three Passions (1666): returned to the older German
- tradition of plainsong narrative + polyphonic motet choruses

- During his lifetime known mainly in Lutheran areas;
- rediscovered in the 19th–20th centuries as a towering figure

- His synthesis of German & Italian elements laid the
- foundation from Schein to Bach to Brahms

猶太禮儀音樂 Jewish Liturgical Music

Salamone Rossi & Polyphony in the Synagogue

- Cantillation remained primary Jewish musical form;
- new techniques emerged in early 1600s despite rabbinical resistance

- Leon Modena (1571–1648): rabbi & humanist; promoted
- polyphony at the Venice synagogue from 1607 onward

- Salamone Rossi (ca. 1570–ca. 1630): Mantuan composer;
- Hashirim asher lish'lomo (Songs of Solomon, 1622–23)

- 33 Hebrew psalms, hymns, synagogue songs in Italian
- polyphonic style — first published Jewish liturgical polyphony

乎雷斯科巴第 Girolamo Frescobaldi (1583–1643)

Organist at St. Peter's, Rome — Keyboard Genius

- Born in Ferrara; organist at St. Peter's, Rome from 1608;
- also served the Grand Duke of Tuscany & Barberini family

- Toccatas: succession of brief sections, each with a distinct
- figure; tempo is free, not tied to a regular beat (affetti)

- Fiori musicali (Musical Flowers, 1635): 3 organ masses
- with toccatas, ricercares, canzonas for liturgical use

- His keyboard works were a model for J. S. & C. P. E. Bach;
- Froberger (his student) spread the style across Europe

NAWM 87: Frescobaldi — Toccata No. 3 (1615)

乎雷斯科巴第《觸技曲第三號》

- From Primo Libro di Toccate (First Book of Toccatas, 1615):
- for harpsichord — succession of brief contrasting sections

- Each section focuses on a particular figure: virtuoso
- passagework, imitative exchanges, cadential weakening

- Sections can be played separately; player may end at any
- cadence — written music as a platform for performance

- Tempo varies with mood: "not subject to a regular beat
- but modified according to the affections" (Frescobaldi)

利切卡爾・坎佐那・奏鳴曲

Ricercare, Canzona, and Sonata

- Ricercare: serious imitative work for organ/harpsichord;
- one subject developed continuously — ancestor of the fugue

- Canzona: imitative piece in contrasting sections;
- markedly rhythmic themes; for keyboard or ensemble

- Sonata 奏鳴曲 : originally any instrumental piece; by
- mid-century = contrasting sections for 1–2 instruments + continuo

- By c. 1650 canzona and sonata had merged;
- "sonata" became the standard term for both

NAWM 88: Marini — Sonata IV, Op. 8 (1629)

馬里尼《第四奏鳴曲》— 小提琴 + 數字低音

- Biagio Marini (1594–1663): violinist at St. Mark's under
- Monteverdi; published 22 collections of vocal & instrumental music

- Sonata IV per il violino per sonar con due corde:
- "instrumental monody" — idiomatic violin writing with continuo

- Contrasting sections: expressive opening like a Caccini
- madrigal → virtuosic figuration, double stops, large leaps

- Rhapsodic & metrical sections alternate; recitative and
- aria styles adapted from vocal music to the violin

變奏・夏康・組曲

Variations, Chaconne / Passacaglia, and Suite

- Variations 變奏 : on borrowed or newly composed themes;
- cantus-firmus type, melodic embellishment, or harmonic bass

- Chaconne 夏康 & Passacaglia 帕薩卡利亞 : variations over
- a ground bass; triple meter, 4 bars; Frescobaldi's Partite (1627)

- Suite 組曲 : linked dances sharing a key; J. H. Schein's
- Banchetto musicale (1617) — padouana, gagliarda, courante, etc.

傳統與創新 Tradition and Innovation

The Lasting Significance of Early 17th-Century Music

- New genres: cantata, sacred concerto, oratorio, sonata,
- partita, chaconne, passacaglia, dance suite

- New techniques: basso continuo, concertato medium,
- ground bass — all became foundational for later Baroque

- Recognition that different styles suit different purposes:
- stile antico for sacred tradition, stile moderno for expression

- Instrumental music gained independence from vocal music;
- toccatas & ricercares compared to orations in rhetorical power
